FROM THE EDITOR

September is a month of transition and natural change, with the sun traversing Virgo and heading into airy Libra. A new season will soon be upon us. We strive to shed those energies we no longer need, nurturing only that which matters in our lives today.

The powerful, iconic voice of Michael Bubl  has captured the hearts of millions around the world; but what's the story behind the voice? Did psychic and metaphysical forces play a part in catapulting this Virgo to fame?

Sapphire is the birthstone of September, and while we've all seen and appreciated this startling blue gemstone, our team takes a closer look at its history and healing properties. We also take a detailed look at Virgo in order to better understand natives of this sign. When you look at the qualities behind the stereotypes, you might be surprised!

WHEN DID YOU FIRST DISCOVER YOUR PSYCHIC TALENTS?

Although people used to tell my Mum that I had "the gift" when I was a toddler, I really didn't understand it until I was a teenager. I just thought everyone could see ghosts and spirits, and I was labelled as a bit odd by people who were not open to these things. Unfortunately that made me self conscious and I shut down. I awoke again in my late twenties and have enjoyed every minute of it since.

WHAT ARE YOUR TALENTS?

My main talent is Clairvoyance. The meaning of clairvoyance is "the supposed ability to perceive things that are not in sight or that cannot be seen." or "keen perception or insight" according to Collins Concise English Dictionary – but I would drop the supposed bit!

WHAT PSYCHIC TOOLS DO YOU USE?

I use Tarot cards as a focus. Tarot cards are thought to have originated in the 15th century as playing cards. The deck consists of 78 cards although mine contain 79 as there is a Wild card amongst them. I use them as a focus for my clairvoyance, never bothering to "learn" the actual meanings of the cards themselves. My teacher told me to "drop the book" (meaning the little booklet that comes with a deck of cards) as that would be too restrictive.

CAN YOU TELL US ONE REMARKABLE STORY FROM A RECENT CLIENT?

I remember one client who was worried about her son's wedding. I told her that I was sorry but I couldn't see the wedding taking place. To my amazement she was relieved, even though a huge amount of money had already been spent on the ceremony. A couple of months later she rang me to say he had called the wedding off as the couple were always at loggerheads. I was able to reassure her that the right decision had been made.

WHY DO YOU ENJOY WORKING FOR CRYSTAL CLEAR PSYCHICS?

I enjoy working for Crystal Clear Psychics because I get to "meet" many interesting clients from all over the world!

VOICE of the SOUL

Can a young child have a premonition of the future? Can events that have not yet come to pass send an echo back through time to the present? These may sound like abstract philosophical questions, but in the case of Michael Bublé, they're closer to reality than you might think. The Canadian-born singer says he knew he wanted to be a famous singer when he was just two years old. As a teenager, he would sleep with a Bible and pray for his musical dreams to come true.

So what happened between then and now? What psychic and spiritual traits was Michael Bublé born with, and how did they help or hinder his path towards stardom? By taking a closer look at his Western and Chinese astrological signs, we can see beyond the powerful tone of Bublé's voice and begin to perceive the tone of his psyche and spirit.

Michael Steven Bublé was born on the 9th of September, 1975 in British Columbia. As a Western Virgo in the Chinese Year of the Rabbit, he came into the world with a curious blend of straight-laced determination and good luck. The Roman Catholic faith with which Bublé was raised may have combined well with the Virgoan energies of his chart, and the urge toward prayer and contemplation may have enhanced his focus and determination. At the same time, Rabbit is seen as one of the luckiest Chinese signs, and natives have a knack for being in the right place at the right time.

However, to say that things came easy for Bublé wouldn't be true at all. Although his intuition send him an early message about his musical future, Bublé's road to the world's most glamorous stages was a long and winding one. From the age of 14, he spent summers working with his father on commercial fishing boats—an experience that would toughen his character and sharpen his work ethic. And although he idolized professional ice hockey players (Bublé and his father were supporters of the Vancouver Canucks), he was disappointed with the realization that he lacked the talent to play professional ice hockey himself.

Bublé's family recognized the power in his voice early on, especially when he sang along to Bing Crosby's White Christmas during the holiday season. But it was his Italian grandfather, Demetrio Santagà, who pushed Michael to enter singing competitions and take his talent seriously. Even so, Michael himself may have been the only one who believed he would become a proper star.

The tenacity of this dream was certainly fueled by the Virgoan tendency to do things in order and remain patient. Michael's early twenties were characterized by a seemingly endless string of talent shows, stand-in TV appearances, and professional encounters that slowly moved him into position to become a marquee entertainer. Rabbit played a definite part here. A chance encounter put Michael's first album (which was independently produced and financed) into the hands of a Grammy winning producer named David Foster. This eventually led to Michael's first record deal, and his large-scale commercial breakthrough around 2003.

Moon in Scorpio and Jupiter in Aries were two other key factors in Michael's rise to fame, as they increased his determination and brought an energy of expansion and momentum to his early career. Now he is a household name, one of the most marketable singers on the planet, and the recipient of countless awards—including four Grammys. The question remains: How did this childhood dream become a reality? In the case of Michael Bublé, it seems luck and determination were two aspects of a single destiny.

Horoscopes

Check out today's horoscopes at <http://crystalclearpsychics.com/horoscopes.html>

Aries

There is big action in your sector of details this month, with a Solar Eclipse on the first day of September providing a backdrop for the rest of the month. But this squares with Saturn in your sector of growth, so any plans you have to open up your world need to be very carefully calibrated. Fortunately, with Jupiter moving on the 9th, relationships can be reborn in the next year.

Cancer

Mercury continues to rewind through to the 22nd. If you are doing any transactions online, keep careful notes of what you buy. However, more positively this could be a time when you decide to upgrade your mode of transport, especially on the back of the Solar Eclipse. However, do pace yourself, because an excess of nervous energy can prove somewhat tiring.

Taurus

A potent T Square and Eclipse as September begins, cautions you to proceed cautiously where anything to do with risk or resources are concerned. Your instincts may be to "go for it", but your needs will be best served by judicious moves. With Mercury also backtracking until the 22nd, information could prove to be skewed or darn right unreliable at times.

Leo

With both Mars and Saturn now direct in your 5th Solar House, hopefully you are getting accustomed to the challenges and yet opportunities that this combination bring. In love, as the Eclipse T Squares Saturn and opposes Neptune, the more sensual and alluring part of any tie can consume you. If shared finances seem hazy or unclear, keep a bit of yourself back, Leo.

Gemini

Your closest relationships come under the astral microscope as Saturn continues to angle with the distorting energies of Neptune. With the Eclipse caught up in this as the month unfolds this may in some way relate to issues of security or where you live. Single Gemini's can however feel a greater sense of joie de vivre for much of the month, but be realistic.

Virgo

You can find yourself energised and on the front foot, but do be conscious that whatever you initiate, others close to you will not necessarily have exactly the same view of your hopes or the same agenda. Your sensitivity and ability to be inclusive will be appreciated. Delightfully, your financial resources can also receive a welcome boost and your love of good things revived.

Libra

The wonderful news this month Libra is that Jupiter the planet of fortune and expansion arrives in your sign for the first time in twelve years. This is going to give you a marvellous boost in the next year, and encourages you to tap into your creative talents with all your might. However, confidential discussions need care. Someone close might also seem strangely out of touch.

Capricorn

In love, things can get more serious or you can find yourself seriously interested by someone you meet through your work. However, travel plans may not go, well, exactly to plan, not at least until the 22nd. The same is true around contractual issues. Choose your words with care. With Saturn influenced by the Eclipse, exaggerated claims may come back to haunt you.

Scorpio

The Solar Eclipse of the 1st asks you to think very carefully about what you want from your long term future. Whilst financial considerations may be part and parcel of this, equally you need to feel content, and most of all fulfilled. These two principles are underlined by the Lunar Eclipse of the 16th. Your sex appeal revives with a massive boost from the 24th of September.

Aquarius

Your friendship sector looks brighter this month, and especially if you can move out of situations or attitudes which are welded to the past or influenced by subtle self doubts. Although in business and financially you cannot expect the world to march to your more idealistic hopes, if you can stay grounded, a period of reworking your resources can aid you enormously.

Sagittarius

Your career is in the spotlight early in this month, but if you really want to make progress it is going to require a degree of sacrifice and self discipline. More emotional and personal considerations cannot be ignored either. However, your talent for networking and reaching out to like minded people suggests a contact can prove vital around one key consideration.

Pisces

You could benefit financially from someone else's good fortune in September, and feel delighted that they are including you in their thoughts. However, it is going to be important to factor in the Mercury Retrograde. For whatever you think or however you say it, this may not be how it gets perceived by others. So work hard at clarifying your position at all times, Pisces.

Spirit of Sapphire

If the spirit of Sapphire could talk, it would certainly have a long and interesting story to tell. Its known history reaches back centuries, through the royal courts of Rome and Greece, through Egypt and the Orient, through Christian churches and Buddhist temples. Since the middle ages, this striking gemstone has been—and continues to be—among the most prized stones in the natural world.

It's not hard to see why. Sapphire is most often seen in striking shades of blue, with a depth and brightness rarely glimpsed in the natural world. It's the kind of blue that carries magical connotations—but this is not the only colour of a Sapphire. Many people are surprised to learn that Sapphires are found in pink, green, violet, orange and even yellow hues. These "non-blue" specimens are called "parti coloured" Sapphires and are found in Australia, among other countries. There is also a rare "colour change" Sapphire which, like the August birthstone Alexandrite, has the power to change colours in different types of ambient light.

There is another rare type of Sapphire that further accentuates the spiritual qualities of this special gemstone. The Star Sapphire, among the most sought-after gemstones in both spiritual and scientific circles, has tiny inclusions along its surface which reflect light into a six-pointed star. Gemologists will explain how certain minerals within the Sapphire cause these stars to form on some specimens—but for many people, the star is a symbol of religious or spiritual faith, and suggestive of the Sapphire's healing and mystical properties.

So what are these properties, exactly? In the spirit of Virgo—the astrological sign that spans most of the month of September—Sapphire is known for energetic properties of innocence, beauty and purity. Ancient physicians and mystics used it as an anecdote for ill patients, as well as a health-restoring talisman for ill patients. Another common use for Sapphire stones and amulets involved psychic protection from evil spirits and bad omens. Star Sapphires in particular were (and still are, according to many modern healers) thought to hold particularly strong properties of spiritual protection. One famous story about Star Sapphire involves Sir Richard Francis Burton, the notable British explorer. He carried a Star Sapphire throughout his adventures in the East, and was convinced it gave him good luck and protection throughout his many dealings. It's said that when Burton was especially grateful to someone for a particular favor or service, he would allow them to view his precious Star Sapphire.

Going further back into history, we see references to Sapphire amongst shamans, priests, royalty and physicians throughout many of the world's cultures. Protection from jealousy, the preservation of fidelity and innocence before and after marriage, and even help in legal matters—people have revered Sapphire for qualities that are far-reaching and metaphysical, as well as imminently practical in the real world. Although this amazing September birthstone isn't the cheapest thing around, history proves that its startling beauty is only the tip of the iceberg.

OTHER INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT SAPPHIRE

- Sapphire is associated with the 5th and 45th wedding anniversaries
- Synthetic sapphire is used in technology, such as the screens on Apple Watches
- The rarest sapphire is orange in colour, and is called padparadscha, which means 'lotus flower' in Sanskrit
- Princess Diana's royal engagement ring was an 18 carat oval sapphire

VIRGO VERTIGO

Sometimes, when you find out that so-and-so is a Virgo, a lightbulb goes off. It just makes sense. Mother Theresa with her selfless devotion and purity of heart. Warren Buffett with his dogged analytical approach to finance. Michael Jackson with his precise, practiced (not to mention astonishing) dance moves. There are certain people—whether famous celebrities or characters in our own lives—who just seem to fit the Virgo bill.

With others, it's not so obvious. The hard-edged American comedian Louis C.K. is a Virgo. Sean Connery, Amy Winehouse and Joan Jett are natives of this sign. Virgoans are some of the hardest working people out there, and as a group they have certainly made their mark on history. Even if you exclude modern day celebrities, you're left with some of the world's most influential figures.

Of course, understanding Virgo is not about obsessing over big names. It's about the Virgos we know and love—even the ones we have a hard time with. Knowing Virgo is about knowing ourselves; because even if you lack Virgo in your own astrological chart, there's a lot to be learned from the energies and traits represented by this mutable earth sign. It can be inspiring, frustrating, perplexing. Do any of the following characters sound familiar?

THE ANALYST

Virgo is known to be a supremely analytical sign. This is inspiring because with Virgo, nothing is taken for granted. The best way to get from point A to point B, as far as this meticulous earth sign is concerned, is to think things through and take a highly methodical approach. It's not as romantic as waving a magic wand, but it gets results in the real world. Virgo is great with details, and unlikely to overlook something important. Whether in career, finance or love, Virgo believes the key is a clear assessment of the entire situation and a smart strategy that leaves little up to chance.

THE PERFECTIONIST

Natives of Virgo tend to make good surgeons, engineers, mathematicians and strategists. It's not difficult to see why. Like the inner workings of a quality timepiece, the Virgo mind runs on precise movements. It prefers to master the framework and work tirelessly. In technical and artistic matters, these qualities can truly impress. In human relationships and questions of spiritual reflection, some Virgoans need to practice quieting the head and connecting to the heart. A Virgo having relationship problems, for example, may tend to rationalise or logically explain things that call for a more intuitive approach.

THE PRUDE

Known for taking the safe and predictable path, Virgo natives are often considered prudish by more adventurous types. They're often criticised for being too logical, and sometimes this criticism is valid. But it's important to consider the spiritual energies behind the Virgoan outlook. This sign has a knack for connecting to what's pure, innocent, healthy and wholesome. For the native Virgo, being reckless does not always sit well. To serve one's self is to be out of balance. To serve others and/or a greater cause is to cultivate a life-affirming sense of purpose and gratitude.

Pinning this sign down is not as easy as it's made out to be. Virgo is blessed with inherent powers of logic and purity of spirit—but as with any sign, these energies express themselves in myriad ways and combinations. But one thing's for sure: The more we understand the Virgo in ourselves, the better we'll be at relating to natives of this wonderful, life-affirming sign.
